In early 2010, 20 young people came together to explore five religious buildings in Belfast. They learned about the architecture of the buildings and how it related to the religions practised inside them. The Behind Closed Doors project looked especially at religious architecture. Each of the faiths explored by the project uses a different type of building and each of the buildings plays an important role in its community.