More Details on Framework Activities
A key barrier to success is fear.

This framework of interconnected activities and responses aims to develop student self-confidence and understanding of the learning cycle within tertiary education and, the role they play within that cycle.

About

This website is part of a research project entitled ‘Introducing Assessment and Feedback: A Framework for Engagement, Empowerment and Inclusion’. Its purpose is to provide information on the project, encourage discussion and disseminate project resources and outputs.

Funding for this project was awarded by the Centre for Higher Education Practice Development Fund (Round 5), University of Ulster. The Principal Investigator is Louise O’Boyle, Lecturer and Course Director of BDes Hons Art and Design (Foundation Year for Specialist Degree).
Value
"I very much like the system in place, it definitely does help inform me and give me confidence as it's a personal approach and therefore feels like the tutor actually cares. Thank you for being so."

"I have found the assessment rewarding and has kept my confidence in the practical work throughout. The tutors have been clear with their criticisms as well which has helped me improve for the forthcoming module"

"Great guidance throughout the year which helped me find my pathway in art and to discover my strengths"
IMPACT
Informed evolution of our tools, practices and approaches
